Fluxus Art Projects announced awards to 16 art institutions in France and the UK to promote a range of Contemporary art practices from each other's countries through exhibitions, festivals, events and curatorial research.

The Fluxus Art Projects is a Franco-British initiative supported by the French Ministry of Culture, Institut Francais, the British Council and private donors,

“The emphasis is on supporting organizations, large and small, that engage with adventurous programming involving artists in each other's countries, not just in the two capitals but dispersed around the regions in France and the UK. In the UK, the presenters range from Tate Modern and the small artists collective Auto Italia South East in London, to Yorkshire Sculpture International and the artist-run organization, Rhubaba in Edinburgh In France, they include the Biennale de Lyon, the Jeu de Paume in Paris, Villa Arson in Nice and the Contemporary Art Centre at the Synagogue de Delme in rural Lorraine,” says the press release.

Catherine Petitgas, Chair, Fluxus Art Projects, said, “ We are delighted this year to have received more than 40 proposals for funding from organizations across the UK and France, with so many exceptional projects. In our view, the opportunity offered to artists to share their work with each other’s countries is ever more vital in a divided world – keeping the doors open to a shared passion for culture between our two countries. This year in particular we have decided to support more diverse artists, more projects spread outside the capitals, and to place more emphasis on experimentation especially in the field of performance. We are immensely grateful to our many generous supporters in continuing to make this opportunity available.”
